

Prunus debilis

Prunus debilis is a South American species of Prunus. Its phenotype suggests close affinity with three other South American species of Prunus; P. littlei, P. guanaiensis and P. wurdackii.^[1] The Jivaro people chew the pulp of its fruit to alleviate the pain of toothaches.^[2]^[3]

This Prunus article is a stub. You can help Wikipedia by expanding it.

